There is certain Advice come to our Court, that her Royal Highness the Princess of Orange is happily advanced into the Seventh Month of her Pregnancy.

To-morrow the Court will go into Second Mourning for the late Landgrave of Hesse Darmstadt.

The Gentlemen to west Black Cloath trimm'd, and colour'd Swords and Buckles.

The Ladies to wear Black Silk or Velvet, colour'd Ribbands, Face and Tippera.

The Court of Great Britain being at this Time in Mourning for the Death of Breeft Lewis the Landgrave of Heffe Darmstadt, 'tis presum'd, that fuc of our Readers as are not furnish'd with the Memoirs of Charles Lewis, Baron de Paluitz will not be dispicas'd with the following Account which he gives not only of the Deceased, but of his Son the present Landgrave, the Baron having stepp'd at this Court for some time, in his Travels thro' Germany. The Account is taken from the 22d Letter of his First Volume.

The LANDGRAVE (meaning the Deceased) one of the Sixteen Children of the Landgrave cons VI. He does not live in the Palace, but leads a retired Life in a little House upon the Square of Darmfield, where he is never feen except on Sundays and Holydays. He amuses himself in turning of Ivory, making chemical Experiments, and in Drawing. He loves Hunting above all things whatsoever. He delights in Agriculture and in whatfoever. He delights in Agriculture and in Musick; and it may strictly be said, that he is never unemployed. He has very great Knowledge natural and acquired; he has feen a great many Countries, and the Sixty Years of Age he still looks well, and his Grey Hairs, not to cast them White, give him a venerable Air. He six a thorse very well, walks well, and seems to enjoy perfect Health. His Wife was Dorothy of Bran enburgh Coultzbach, who died in 1705. They say that he lately married N—de Spiegel, the Widow of Count Seibelssors, a Licutenant General in the Service of Bavaria; be that as it will, the Marriage is vice of Bavaria; be that as it will, the Marriage is not publick, and the Lady fill goes by the Name of her former Hubund by whom the has Children. The true that the Landgrave pays her great Diffinction, and indeed the levery smiable. This Prince commonly dienes at a little Table forcad only for Four People ; but on Sundays and Holydays he goes to the Ladies, who are never feen at Court but upon those Days. 'Tis a very hard Master to come upon those Days. 'Tis a very hard Marter to come at the Speech of the Landgrave, and much more to that of his only Son the Hereditar, Prince. The Hunting-officers are the only Persons that have the Privilege of Access to them; for which Resson this is not one of the most entertaining Course, and a Man is under a Necessity of throwing himself into

People of Meric, who are civil to Foreigners.

The Heredicary Prince Ls wis, the only Son of the Landgrave, who was born the 5th of April, 1691. is a handlome Man, has a noble Air, dances well, mounts a Horfe well, has Vivacity, Spirit and Policinell, but is often thempleful malestable and Policinell. litenes, but is often thoughtful, melancholy, and goes for Retirement to the Woods, where he is passionately fond of Hunting; but it apt to create pathonately fond or running, but the provide the bimself Uncasiness, and does not know how to difference it. The he has all the Qualities necessary to finine in Company, yet he sees but very little.

He matried Charlotta Christina of Hansey, who dying in 1726, left him Three Sons and Two Daughters, the eldest of which was then Seven Years of Age. By virtue of this Marriage the Prince is Heir to the Count of Hanau's Estate in Alface, and to all his Freeholds in General, which will be a very rich Succession.

Neverthele's the Court of Darmfladt is very numerous. The Lindgrave has a great many Com-fellors of State, Gentlemen of the Bedchamber and Curt, and a greater Number fill of Officers of the Venery, and Huntings. There is not a Province in Germany more proper for Hunting, nor in Engrepe where there are more Deer. This Plat even Country, and a gravelly Soil, interspected with Woods through which there are cut noble Roads.

SIR,

O make a right Judgment of Parties, as well as particular Men, we are to recollect their Actions and Sentiments at different Times, and in different Circumfiances. In the latter End of Queen dane's Reign, when it was notorious that a Set of Men thought the Succession of the Pretender cerfain, behold the Language the Difaffe acd Party in London then spoke. The Pretender's Hopes being then defeated, and the Hansver Succession (thank God) having taken Place, behold the " Language of a Party frang from the Embers of 1713 exhibited new upon all Occasion; and then, Reader, say what are the Designs of the Malecontents, with whom all the Jacobices and Tories in the Kingdom unite.

The follosing Piece was published and given about the City of London, in Publick Bills, in Sup port of the Gentlemen therein named, in Opposition to Four Worthy Merchants, who were also Candidates.

'The Subject Matter of my Diffcourse is the Honour of my Country, the Life and Actions of one of the greatest Kinga that perhaps the World ever faw; the Rights of the English Crown, and how well our Ancestors were able to vindicate them.

It is an old Observation, That Subjects usually conform themselves to their Prince: And here certainly, if ever any Great and Martial Monarch was Lord of any like himself, we shall find this King to have been so. Many Great and Renowned Heroes and Captains, Bold in Attempts, Wife in Conduct, and Fortunate in Success, being thick almost in every Page of this History : Wherein will appear the greatest Variety of Adventures, the most hazardous Entergreatent variety of Adventures, the most hazardous Enter-prizes of War, the most Exact Councils, and Politick Nego-ciations, and the most frequent Instances of Courage, Piety, Generosity, and Princely Conduct; with the most whole-fome Laws and Rules of Government, that perhaps the whole World can jurnish us withal, in so short a Period of Time.

Sir Walten Raleou's History of the World is a Work of fo vast a Compass, such endless Variety, that no Genius, but one adventurous at his own, dust have undertaken that great Design. I do not apprehend any great Dissionally in collecting and common-placing an Universal History from the whole Body of Historians, that is nothing but mechanic Labour. But to dingst the several Authors in his OMind, to take in all their OMajesty, Greength, and Beauty, to raise the Spirit of measure Historians, and to equal all the Excellencies of the best, is Six Walter's peculiar Fraise. His Style is the most perfect, the happiest, and most beautiful of the Age he wrote in, majestic, clear and many; and he appears every-where so superior, rather than unequal to his Subject, that the Spirit of Rome and Athens seems to be breathed into his Wark.
